Police Resettlement magazine

Police Resettlement is a quarterly magazine that is distributed free of charge to currently serving and retired police officers. The magazine is available in print and online with hard copies being distributed to the 43 local police forces in England and Wales as well as the British Transport Police and associated police support organisations.

Key Facts

There are currently around 222,697 with 213,620 full-time equivalent police officers and civilian staff in the 43 police forces of England and Wales. There are 129,854 of these staff who are police officers, which is a decrease from the previous year of around 4,500. These numbers will further decline due to government cut-backs and a concerted effort to encourage more special constables.

Each year around 7,000 personnel leave the police force due to natural 'fall out' from retirements in addition to any planned voluntary redundancies as police officers numbers decline.

In July 2011, Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) published a report entitled 'Adapting to Austerity' which assessed the preparedness of the police for and authority for the 2011/12 to 2014/15 CSR period. The report estimated that there would be a reduction of 34,100 police officers and staff. The public outcry has meant a steadier, more gradual reduction in police numbers.

The minimum age for applicants is 18 with no upper age limit, the average joining age is said to be between the ages of 21-24. Typically police officers will serve 25 years meaning they will retire from the ages of 43-49 based on the largest number of those joining. With this in mind ex-Police officers may have 20-25 years of working life ahead of them.

Overview

Ex-Police Officers have numerous attributes and transferable skills such as: being able to work under their own initiative, yet still being team players; understanding the hierarchy and chain of command; hard working, dedicated, loyal, and committed to name a but few. This is why many employers are keen to recruit from this pool of knowledge.

Police Resettlement is not only about employment opportunities for its readers, we also offer franchise opportunities for those wishing to start their own business and there are numerous colleges and universities that offer distance learning courses as well as adult learning. These courses will not only benefit those seeking new employment, but also those looking for career progression whilst still serving within the police. resettlement training companies also offer an abundance of courses from accounting, trades training, locksmith training, managerial, health and safety, and many more. Each issue will also contain all the latest government and police information for its readers to keep them up to date with current affairs making the magazine a must read for everyone. As some of our readers may not wish to look for future opportunities and would rather enjoy the fruits of their labour we also cater for their needs by offering a lifestyle section which includes, holiday destinations and overseas retirement properties, car dealership and manufacturers' offers, insurance and pension information as well as events and organisations that will be of interest to our readers.
